CUT

Ext. Rocky Terrain. Night.

Reprise Scene 47 Episode
Three.

THE DOCTOR straining to lift the column that entombs the unconscious
ROMANA. Intercutting on the ever reducing counter. With only fifteen seconds left
we are very TIGHT ON THE DOCTOR.

THE DOCTOR: It's no good ....!!!

The muzzle of a Movellan gun edges into SHOT, presses against the DOCTOR'S NECK. There is a high pitched buzzing sound.

The DOCTOR writhes in pain then falls unconscious.

WIDEN TO SHOW AGELLA, COMMANDER SHARREL, LAN and a couple of MOVELLAN CREWMEN standing behind the DOCTOR. They look down without emotion.

They turn their attention to the timer. It completes its cycle with a click. Nothing more happens. SHARREL turns sharply to AGELLA.

SHARREL: Malfunction?

AGELLA: No. I didn't arm the device. It seemed unnecessary as we merely wanted to draw the Doctor in to the open.

SHARREL: Very well...

He indicates the DOCTOR and turns to the CREWMEN.

SHARREL: Take him.

To the TWO WOMEN.

SHARREL: You bring her...

The CREWMEN lift the DOCTOR and start to carry him away. SHARREL follows.

AGELLA and LAN release the seals at the base of the tube and start to lift it.

ANOTHER ANGLE:

Some distance away hidden amongst the rocks we see TYSSAN observing the scene. He watches with concern for a few moments and then moves away purposefully.

An excellent analysis of the position...
I will try to summarise... For the last three centuries the Daleks have been engaged in a war against a race of robots called Movellans.
Correct?

FIRST DALEK: Correct. Dalek superiority will ultimately triumph and the Movellan force will be exterminated.

DAVROS: It is perfectly obvious that without my help and guidance Dalek superiority will never be established...

DOCTOR: Two of the greatest battle fleets in the history of the Universe locked together. Neither can advance or retreat. ... It sounds to me that you have discovered the perfect formula for ever lasting peace.

SHARREL: Our objective is victory. That will come with the total destruction of the Dalek fleet. Our battle computers must have a new element programmed into them ... An advantage, however small that will change the balance of power.

ROMANA: And the Daleks want the same thing ... Its obvious now ... that's why they came here to reactivate Davros.

SHARREL: We thought it was something of the sort ... That's why we followed them here. It was our good fortune that we came across you Doctor ... When we reach the fleet, you will reprogramme our battle computers. The Dalek fleet will be wiped from the heavens, then nothing will stand in the way of our conquest of the galaxy.

ROMANA: You're as bad, if not worse than the Daleks.

DOCTOR: And there's something you seem to have overlooked ... Always assuming that I was able to help you change the balance of power ... (cont ...)

THE DOCTOR: Of course I could.
The answer's obvious:

ROMANA: Oh. Is it?

THE DOCTOR: Yes. Both sides were robots, fighting by computer.
Their strategies were perfectly logical. Each computer could perfectly predict and counter any move made by the other one.
Result: stalemate.

ROMANA: Yes. I know that. But how do you break the stalemate?

THE DOCTOR: Come on, it's very simple. If each side can logically predict the actions of the opposing computer, (cont...)

THE DOCTOR: (cont) then the first side that turns it's computer off and does something irrational ...

ROMANA: Wins the battle!

THE DOCTOR: Exactly! Make mistakes and confuse the enemy!

ROMANA: Brilliant! Is that why you always win?

THE DOCTOR: What?

ROMANA: Because you always make mistakes?

THE DOCTOR: Make mistakes! Me? Well, maybe the odd one, you know, every century or so ...

Reaction ROMANA.

Ext. Cliff Face. Night.

THE TARDIS dematerialises.
Almost immediately it
rematerialises.

ROMANA: (OOV) Not that switch Doctor, that one.

THE DOCTOR: What? Oh yes ...

TARDIS Dematerialises
again.

TELECINE 3:

Ext. Rocky Terrain. Night.

LAN picks his way amongst the rocks. Arrives at what is obviously a pre-determined point. He sets down the nova device then operates a small communicator.

IAN: Lan. Advise the commander the Nova device is in position, armed and primed. I am standing by for his orders. Out.

LAN switches off. Takes a look around and then sits beside the nova device. Her hand rests lightly on the detonating button.
